The human E-11 adenocarcinoma cells, which are sensitive to NK cell activity, were used to study the expression of the chondroitin sulfate (CS) proteoglycan in vitro and in vivo. Lectin histochemistry showed that the cells are stained with concanavalin A (ConA) and agglutinated by the purified human placental CS tetrasaccharide, TS. After culture of the E-11 cells in 6-well plates for 5 days, ConA-positive cells were removed with periodic washes, and the remaining CS expression was examined by enzymatically digesting the cells with chondroitinase and then immunoprecipitating CS chains with antichondroitinase ABC, antichondroitinase ACII and antichondroitin-N-acetylgalactosamine antibody. Both ACII- and N-acetylgalactosamine-specific antibodies recognized in vitro cultured E-11 cells, indicating that the cells express CS chains with CS4-6 and CS6-4, respectively. [3H]CS4-6 and [3H]CS6-4 disaccharides were incorporated into the E-11 cells, while [3H]CS2-4 and [3H]CS2-6 disaccharides were not incorporated. Acidic CS was partially labeled by 3H-disaccharides that could not be completely split by chondroitinase treatment. Fluorescent and electron microscopic study showed that
