Blackmagic Design has announced a new upgrade to its popular Color Grading workstation, the DaVinci Resolve 12. BlueCat Audio Colorgrading.Net - Sound SUPER LIGHTING. In a world where even a classic film looks like a modern film, it's a little hard to imagine what the darkroom looked like. Color Grading has become a big part of all visual media. For years, film had a level of inherent contrast that gave it a distinctive look. Compare a movie theater today to one from the late 1970s, and you'll notice a huge difference. While it is true that digital cameras and video can achieve the same levels of contrast, there are significant differences that are impossible to replicate with the same result in film. Film has its own look, and there is no getting around that.
