For some people, it feels like the perfect time to renew some vows — or even just to start over from scratch with new rituals. The new year is a good time to start thinking about what we want to change in ourselves and in our routines, according to experts. For some people, it feels like the perfect time to renew some vows — or even just to start over from scratch with new rituals. According to Dr. Michelle Schurgin of the University of Massachusetts Amherst, "It's a time to set intentions and set goals. There may be a lot of reflection on what you want for the year, and that sets the tone." Which is to say, let's focus on the bad habits and focus on replacing them with good habits. Everyone has the potential to develop new habits and create new rituals. There's no shortage of advice on what we should do to get to where we want to be. Here's a look at some of the most common New Year's resolutions and how they can be made to stick. A resolution list of healthy habits includes things such as taking a walk, getting a good night's sleep, trying new things and doing something fun. (The New York Times) 1. Don't make one "Personally, I want people to not make a resolution to lose weight or get in shape because everyone has different expectations of themselves when it comes to certain things," says Dr. Alison King, a weight loss doctor at the Lenox Hill Hospital in New York City. "Resolutions tend to set up unrealistic goals, which is particularly problematic when you expect them to stick. We tend to also set unachievable goals because then if we fail,

PREPARE FOR INDOOR ESCAPING NO DOUBT! Somewhere deep in the sky, a small plane is departing for its final destination.

As it passes through the airspace, topless women with a variety of skin colours, and many different shapes, are preparing their parachutes for a dramatic free fall. They are dressed in different outfits and here are some aerial dancers, who wear traditional outfits, but are dancing on a stage. Among them is a Japanese dancer. She is very slender, has long hair, a smile on her face, and a white costume. Her name is Miyoko. The sky expands as time passes. Towards the end, many clouds appear in the sky. They are hovering in the distance, as the plane finally returns to earth. The cityscape is clearly visible on the ground. But to the sky, it is still very far. Towards the end, the plane dives in the atmosphere. Miyoko is happy about the free fall, but she starts to have some doubts.

The fear of death is already waiting for her, even before she comes back to reality. She is fidgeting in her seat, and as time passes, she is aware that she is slowly drawing closer to the death of her spirit. She thinks to herself. "I will never see my parents again, since they are already dead. I am far away from everyone I care about. I have no person I love. Who will look after me if I die? I am so alone. I am never alone in my bed." Suddenly, Miyoko is not alone anymore. A young woman appears beside her. The woman smiles at Miyoko. Miyoko is shocked. The woman addresses Miyoko in a variety of languages. She speaks so fluently in Japanese that Miyoko cannot understand a word. Miyoko replies. "You are a Japanese woman? You are so beautiful." The woman smiles. "Do you know what it means?" She takes Miyoko's hand in hers. "It is love. I am your maid." Miyoko is still in shock. Her mind is grappling with the image of a Japanese woman with long black hair, who is running away from her plane. She thinks about the incredible experience, that she had 3e33713323
