Download Windows 10 activated for free, 14/05/2017. Windows 10 Activation Key, 7/20/2016. Windows 10 activation key is on February's side when it comes to Lucasfilm's Han Solo standalone film in production. The studio began casting at the start of the year — an effort that already included a downsized cast — and while audiences wait to see who will take over the role that Harrison Ford graced for three decades, a THR report reveals the specific nature of the search. Harrison's son, Ben Ford, is reportedly one of many "top candidates" for the role. The report also includes a detail that we've suspected for awhile: Harrison Ford has passed away, but Solo will be released as scheduled, likely at the end of the year. This means that Solo will be the final film to be produced by Lucasfilm's most famous living star, a fact that is likely going to cause a stir when it comes time to release the film. It's also given Solo's production schedule an even bigger curveball, as Lucasfilm's standalone efforts traditionally have been held back until after The Force Awakens has been released. Now, two of the biggest Star Wars moments have been moved to a period that will have very little dramatic weight in canon. Solo still carries the Star Wars title, so he still has significant weight behind him, but it still seems like a gamble. The transition will be awkward, and it certainly won't have the same emotional weight as the original Star Wars trilogy. As a standalone, Solo will make more of an impact, but the film will be rated PG-13, which is a risky move when it comes to sharing the Star Wars universe with JJ Abrams' upcoming Star Wars: The Force Awakens, which comes out in a few months. Beyond Solo, there's also hope that the next Star Wars will fill in the gaps and restore some mystery to the galaxy. Production on the new trilogy is already underway, so it seems like Lucasfilm's time frame won't be much of a concern. But the studio is reportedly scouting locations for

Nassau County may soon start wearing body cameras while on patrol. A bill to authorize body cameras for Nassau County police officers is being circulated in the county Legislature. It's one of several bills being circulated this week that are aimed at speeding up the passage of local legislation. The measure would require officers to make video recordings during all on-duty traffic stops, all arrests of suspects, all on-duty shootings, all on-duty physical altercations, all contact with a school, and all daytime searches of a residence or business. It could also require the installation of the cameras, at the expense of the agency. But the bill also proposes making body cameras voluntary for officers — and gives them the power to decide whether to use the cameras. The Nassau County Police Benevolent Association has spoken out against the bill, arguing that the officer in the body camera would become the "judge, jury and executioner." "Requiring a device that records officer activity and demonstrates the innocence of any officer accused of a violation before there is any investigation or trial is constitutionally suspect and impermissible, even under the most relaxed circumstances," the union said in a statement in opposition to the bill. Some bills, like this one, are circulating to be heard by the County Legislature at the same time; others, like one that would repeal New York's death penalty, are expected to be taken up next week. # /*  # * 3e3713323
