Arginine (Arg) metabolism and the growth hormone (GH) response to Arg were investigated in malignant solid tumors. All ten patients studied had no evidence of liver, renal or lymph-node metastases. There was no significant difference between the GH responses to Arg and L-Arg (2.9 +/- 0.9 vs. 3.7 +/- 1.2 microunits/ml, p greater than 0.05) in all eight patients with solid tumors. Compared with the control value of 0.35 +/- 0.02 microunits/ml, only one patient had a significantly higher GH response to Arg than L-Arg (1.7 vs. 0.48 microunits/ml, p less than 0.005) and two patients had an early GH response to Arg (33 and 60 min after injection), which was not observed after L-Arg. In the patients studied, a significant correlation was observed between the GH response to Arg or L-Arg and the plasma levels of sex-hormone-binding globulin (SHBG), but not testosterone. In contrast, the plasma testosterone level did not correlate with the GH response to Arg or L-Arg. The results indicate that the GH response to Arg is not associated with the tumor-related status and that the role of SHBG in the regulation of the GH response to Arg remains to be elucidated. "I would only do a big thing like this if it's something I really believe in," he said. "And I like the idea of working with my wife, my parents, so they're always there with me on film sets." As for meeting President Trump, he said he and Harington were both anxious, but everything went off without a hitch.
