[Comparison of the histochemical methods of detection of acid glycoprotein in blood]. In in vitro experiments blood serum of healthy donors was incubated with 96% ethanol and then with chloroform, with sodium acetate and then with zinc chloride. The glycoprotein was detected by the methods: histochemical localisation of carbohydrate components by sulphuric acid-fuchsin; histochemical method of detection of Alcian blue after incubation of blood serum with enzyme polyvinylsulphonate; immunoenzymatic reaction of polyclonal antibodies against serum albumin. The immunoenzymatic reaction method is preferable for detection of glycoproteins of blood serum. # Protocol Buffers for Go with Gadgets # # Copyright (c) 2013, The GoGo Authors. ## What's New in the?

Gene trap screening identifies a mouse homologue of malignant lymphoma-1 (malt-1), a p53 target gene, as a novel negative regulator of cell proliferation. p53 is a protein involved in the induction of cell cycle arrest and apoptosis in response to cellular stress. Because the p53 family member p73 is involved in both tumor suppression and oncogenesis, we hypothesized that p73 might be an important mediator of the tumor suppressive activities of p53. To test this, we analyzed p73 knockout mouse embryonic fibroblasts (MEFs). We found that p73 protein and mRNA were undetectable in p53 mutant MEFs, which had significantly reduced proliferation compared to wild type MEFs. Furthermore, cells lacking p73 had decreased p53 and p21 protein levels. Real-time RT-PCR studies demonstrated that p73 mRNA was highly abundant in wild type MEFs compared to p53 mutant MEFs. The kinetics of gene trap insertion of the intron trap cassette into p73, however, differed in the wild type and p53 mutant MEFs. Insertion into p53 resulted in a high incidence of cells with a single intron trap cassette per nucleus, leading to the observed accelerated cell death and a total lack of p53 protein in these cells. In contrast, insertion into p73 did not appear to result in premature cell death. Finally, we show that p73 is a novel, functional p53 target gene. Together, these results suggest that p73 plays an important role in the normal growth control of cells in the presence of wild type p53. %YAML 1.1 %TAG!u! tag:unity3d.com,2011: ---!u!1001 &100100000 Prefab: m_ObjectHideFlags: 1 serializedVersion: 2 m_Modification: m_TransformParent: {fileID: 0} m_Modifications: [] m_RemovedComponents: [] m_ParentPrefab: {fileID: 0} m_RootGameObject: {fileID: 1220905207107796} m_IsPrefabParent: 1 ---!u!1 &1220905207107796 GameObject: m_ObjectHideFlags: 0 m_PrefabParentObject: {fileID: 0}
