In the first part of this tutorial you will learn how to install a MySQL database using XAMPP, the Apache and Mysql open source service, and how to create some test data using the MySQL client program SequelPro. Next, you will learn how to create a table within a MySQL database using SequelPro, and how to create two tables with the same name using SequelPro, and how to create multiple tables in a MySQL database using SequelPro. Using SQL you can create any number of tables to store the information. At the end of this tutorial you will learn how to create some basic test data, and view your data from SequelPro. You can also import data from CSV files, MySQL dump files and MySQL database dumps. Creating a MySQL database When you create a MySQL database using XAMPP you will be able to create a table in it using SQL. You will first need to install XAMPP and navigate to the installation directory, you will then be able to install MySQL using the XAMPP installer. Next we will connect to the MySQL database that we just installed using SequelPro. This program is a SQL client that is very easy to use. You will also need to set a password for the MySQL database. By default there is no password set, and the root user does have the access to all the information, so you are going to need to change the username and password. Change username Navigate to the location where you installed MySQL, and find the mysqldb folder. Inside this folder you will find the my.ini file. This is a MySQL config file. Open my.ini in a text editor. You should see some settings that look like this below. [mysqld] default-storage-engine = default-character-set = utf8 init-connect = "SET NAMES utf8" character-set-server = collation-server = init-connect = "SET NAMES utf8" You can see the option values below the initial section. These options are the settings for your MySQL connection. In the past there were many options for these settings, but now there are just two options These will define where MySQL databases are stored. In the past all databases were stored under this
