configurable parameters. GnuTLS - PGP and S/MIME (see pgpmime) utilities. The GNU Privacy Guard (GnuPG) software is a complete replacement for PGP, the popular privacy-enhanced version of the GNU Privacy Handbook. Unlike PGP, GNU privacy guard (GnuPG) can be used to digitally sign and encrypt messages and documents, sign and encrypt software packages, and digitally sign CVS, Subversion and Darcs repositories (additionally with gpg2). GnuPG can also be used to protect email, by digitally signing and/or encrypting the To, CC, and From: headers of messages. It can also be used to digitally sign and encrypt email (see Enigmail and enigmail-ng). GnuPG manages public and private keys and encrypts and decrypts data. In contrast with PGP, GnuPG does not have a "public key" as such, but it associates files with both a public and a private key in a specific folder structure. The user can change this folder structure to whatever suits them. Once a file has been encrypted with a private key, it is irreversible. GnuPG is written in the Portable Programming Language (PPL) and provides features that are useful in other areas as well. GnuPG is free software; the source code is available. GNU Privacy Guard is free to use, share, and study for free, under the GNU General Public License. GPGTools - GPG and PGP (see pgerror) utilities.
