Q: Check if an instance of a Firebase object is null I am trying to check if an object of an instance of Firebase List is null, because I need to remove it, but I get errors. My code looks like this:

if(users == null) { users =

googleFireBase.Value(of:.data(userList)); } But then I get errors:

Cannot convert value of type 'List!' to expected argument type

'Data' And: Invalid type in conditional binding: Unspecified in type cast Can you please help me? A: The Value function returns a List, which is a struct, which means you cannot assign a value to it.

You have two options to fix this issue: Change to a reference to the list's value (:) operator. This should work fine and use the existing instance of the list rather than creating a new one. var

users = googleFireBase.Value(of:.data(userList)); users =

users.filter { it == null } Note that this is not a great solution as it still creates a new list. Create a new instance of the list before assigning it to the existing variable. var users =

googleFireBase.Value(of:.data(userList)) users = users.filter { it

== null } Q: gwt - Generate a string from loop generated number

I'm new to GXT, i am using it for my application. Currently i can print a number by using int number = 1; for (i = 0; i

What's New in the?

Q: Passing array(?) data to a component in Vue.js I'm trying to pass an array of "project" objects to a project component to display the titles in a list, each within its own element. My approach was to pass the array to the component as such: methods: { filter(name){ console.log(name); } }, data () { return { projects : [], } }, mounted () { this.fetchData() }, methods: { fetchData () { var axios = require('axios'); axios.get("") .then(response => { this.projects = response.data; }); } } filtered projects: {{ filteredprojects }} {{ project.title }}
