Quick Reference Toolbar Quick Reference Toolbar Press and hold Ctrl+Alt+Del on your keyboard and choose the Photoshop window to display a list of all the open windows and documents. You can also press Ctrl+Esc to display the Open Windows panel. Press Ctrl+Alt+U to display the Universal Windows Controls Window. Click the arrow next to the New Layer button to open the New Layer dialog box. Click the New Layer button and choose Layer from the menu, or click the New Layer button and choose the image. The Layer menu at the top of the panel is the standard menu for all

Photoshop image layers. Photoshop automatically converts the type of file you are working with. The default is the native file type but you can set Photoshop to import other types of files. Use the Type drop-down menu to choose the type of file, such as JPG, GIF, TIFF, Photoshop, or Photoshop Elements. For more detailed information about the native file format, see Changing a File Type (page 3). Double-click a layer thumbnail in the Layers panel to open it for editing. While you are editing a layer, you can use any tool in Photoshop that alters the transparency of the layer. (Most tools that modify the opacity of the layer are also called "layers.") Editing an image in Photoshop is a slow process, because the layers are stored in a separate file. To save yourself time, open multiple images at once in Photoshop and work in batches. For more tips on working in Photoshop quickly, see Working with Photoshop Files (page 30). Layers are built in a hierarchical, layered structure. You can open layers on separate windows by choosing Window⇒New Window, or by pressing Alt+Tab to open a new window with one open image. You can also control the layout of your layers by making them independent by choosing Edit⇒Arrange. The Manage Layers dialog box opens to show all the layers in the current document. To remove a layer, choose Layer⇒Delete Layer or Ctrl+D. To move a layer to another location in the image, choose Layer⇒Move Layer Up or Ctrl+Alt+Up arrow. To move a layer to another layer in the same image, use Layer⇒Move Layer Down or Ctrl+Alt+Down arrow. To duplicate a layer, use Layer⇒Duplicate Layer. To add a layer, choose Layer⇒New Layer or Ctrl+Alt+N. The layer is added as a

More than 100 people were arrested for defecating in public in the city, the public prosecutor's office said on Friday. Viktor Shevchenko, the prosecutor's spokesman, said most of the people were arrested on Thursday during a raid in the town of Shestakivka near Donetsk, Ukraine's second-largest city. He added that five police officers were injured while searching the public restrooms. "The arrested people came from Donetsk, Dnipropetrovsk regions and other cities in eastern Ukraine," Mr. Shevchenko said. He did not provide further details. The city of Donetsk has been caught in a political and military crisis since June, when the authorities in Kiev removed the pro-Russian president, Viktor F. Yanukovich, amid mass protests. Some residents of Donetsk have also tried to create a breakaway region in eastern Ukraine, which is fiercely opposed to Ukraine's plans to integrate with the European Union and align with its laws and judicial system.

Tag Archives: brand The digital world is fast evolving and the old brick-and-mortar stores are facing pressure from the new technologies and digital changes. In order to provide better customer experience, store owners are trying to introduce new technologies in their stores. Modern stores are equipped with digital and electronic media such as the touch screen, self-checkout, checkout booths, and so on. Although it is true that this trend is providing overall better customer experience, the store owners are not ready to lose their traditional customers. Brick-and-mortar stores are competing for the new technology, which may not leave an old-fashioned customer in the store. The role of the customers is also getting upgraded and the customers are more interested in the convenience and the own identity. Despite the convenience gained by the technology, the shopping experience of the customers is still up for debate. Customers Care about the Brick-and-Mortar Stores Customers are not ready to leave the traditional store but they still prefer to shop at the brick-and-mortar stores because it provides them the authentic shopping experience. Shopping is a social activity and this is a reason why customers want to visit their favorite shops. They always want to feel comfortable in a store because they want to be treated like their favorite store, as well as the brand. Customers prefer traditional stores because it offers them a more personal service and an authentic experience
