The impact of the difference between real-life high intensity data and the data used in previous FIFA titles can be seen in the new EA Trax System, an advanced, fully integrated and customizable engine that is used to create the fast-paced and addictive gameplay. "We've never really been able to capture the drama and intensity of a 90 minute match on a feature console game before, but through the wide use of motion capture technology, we can now track real-life player data to portray a more realistic football environment and dynamics," said David Rutter, Creative Director on FIFA 22. "It is one thing to play the game, but when you're in the moment of winning or losing a match, you feel the intensity of the real thing," said Geoff Richardson, Studio Head on FIFA 22. "This year we've taken that to a whole new level with HyperMotion Technology that we think makes an incredible difference to the overall feel of the game." The impact of the new EA Trax Technology can be seen in the new physics engine, brand-new animation pipeline, combined with new AI and improved player intelligence. The new physics engine and dynamic weather system allows gameplay on the pitch to accurately and realistically represent a complete, high-intensity football match with weather and pitch variables like slush, snow, rain, heat, lightning, wind, atmospheric conditions and temperature changes. FIFA 22 marks the first time that players can act and react to the environment and the weather on the pitch. The engine has been rebuilt from the ground up to allow the AI to react and adapt to environmental variables like the pitch conditions and the weather. The on-pitch atmosphere has been significantly improved with dynamic weather effects like rain and wind, sprinkles of snow and new lighting features. A variety of unique features have been added to FIFA 22 with new game modes like Ultimate Team Ultimate Draft, Global Gameplay, Squad Battles and Forge, and more gameplay improvements such as more than twice as many pitch variables, improved attacking options and smarter AI on-pitch behaviour. The player intelligence of AI teammates has also been significantly improved. The goalkeepers in FIFA 22 are even more intelligent, as they react more realistically in traffic situations and are more able to save shots, cut off passing options and control the run of play. Finally, the new, refined gameplay improvements added in the last few years will be even more noticeable

Get a first-hand look at the new game features and technology powering Electronic Arts' FIFA, the world's most popular, authentic soccer video game. You'll also be guided through an exclusive workout from star U.S. Women's National Team midfielder Crystal Dunn. Learn how Dunn got into the game as she takes you through the dedicated fitness program she uses to keep strong and fit. Follow Dunn's run as she shows you the new moves and technologies that make FIFA the game it is today. Why create a dedicated fitness program? Speaking to EA Sports, Dunn, a three-time FIFA Women's World Cup champion and U.S. Women's National Team captain, shares the importance of finding the balance between fun and fitness: "I'd like to show you because you have to have the fitness to be able to play that position.... You have to love it and you have to play it. So I want to play for 10 years and do well in it. If I want to stay the next 10 years and play in it, I have to play it when I'm at my prime. And the more I enjoy it, the better I'll get." The player's motto? "Love it and Play It" Aside from helping players like Crystal stay fit, Dunn also wants to encourage women to play the sport and make it a part of their daily lives. "A lot of people don't want to play because they're worried about getting hurt, and all they want is like a casual game. But it's the opposite. You have to have the fitness.... You have to love it, so when you play football, you look forward to the game." What's behind the new FIFA's Fitness program? Look no further than FIFA's core gameplay improvements and the new Fitness program, which introduces new ways to train players, improve their fitness and stay in shape. The feature will play a critical role in FIFA's new Training Mode, which gives players the tools needed to master their technique and improve their reflexes. FIFA is not only the world's most popular soccer video game, it's also a great sports simulator that offers a wide variety of new ways to play, including new Team Comps, an all-new Matchday and franchise mode that gives players more control than ever over their clubs and squads. How will the new Fitness program play a
