Q: ADF batch update, what triggers a transaction status of "CATATONIC" I have a case where I have a form with several data table being updated, but the moment the user clicks update - all the messages "updating messages" start flowing. Since the update is a batch update - I don't have a transaction scope trigger. Does this cause my messages to indicate that the transaction is "cata-tonic"? A: In case of updates, PCC will not be able to determine the changes made to the data. It sends a refresh message. If the user is leaving the page and returns, the data are refreshed and PCC can determine if the data have been changed. Refresh can be sent via timer. But you could also use cfajaxflashes to make it happen automatically. the best and worst of you. It's terrible to think about, but all those blank paper walls at the back of hallways have a tendency to collect layers and layers of stick-on labels. I've found sticky notes have their place (I love not having to be bothered with finding the page to post a note on and also find them handy for quick reminders), but are the best for addressing what is stored on them and being collected in the perfect paper rainbow that is Hallways. Food I Want To Eat Before I Die. (In the same theme as my room, not that a theme in a room matters...) It's not even worth putting all of the food that I'd like to eat before I die down on here because it would probably take up too much space. However, there are a couple of things: Citrus fruits Smoked fish (sushi is a great introduction to smoked fish, and I love smoked salmon) There are thousands of other things I'd love to eat before I die, but I'll have to have a more creative list for you. Time is against me though, so I'll have to make do with these. Ask Yourself... The Glorious, Existential And Irrelevant Questions Of Your Life. So now that you have a good look at some of the more productive things that you can do with your time, you need to come to grips with the fact that 'time' is a tricky thing. Like the fact that you've got a finite amount of time, and the fact that every

What's New In?

Self-flagellated Guy Sanders from the UK has been nominated for the first "Guitar World Awards" which honor world's top guitarists. "With his exemplary craftsmanship, dazzling technique, and artful improvisation, Sanders breaks new ground for himself and guitar playing. Influenced by a wide variety of styles, he displays an incredible imagination while delving deep into the structural features of the instrument. "Ever curious about his fellow artists and the development of the instrument, Sanders is a member of the London Musicians Collective, a band with many players from various disciplines that brings together the traditional approach to the instrument with an experimental and contemporary approach, resulting in virtuoso performance and masterful playing." In his acceptance speech, the guitarist stated: "The beauty of the guitar is the fact that it's just a tool for creating music, and its methods can be utilised in all areas of contemporary and traditional music. "I don't have any real ambitions in terms of fame or fortune, and it seems everything happens for a reason. I'd like to give a massive thanks to everyone involved in the awards process. I sincerely hope I've done your time and work justice, and congratulations." Mix things up, even if they're in his or her comfort zone. I get so carried away with being perfect at my job that I have a hard time being good enough for anyone else. When I found out I was expecting my second child, I had to make a big decision: what should I call my baby? I found a designer's name kit online and started to work on it. I even had the perfect designs, but I couldn't get over my fear of hurting someone's feelings by calling it their name, even if they would be okay with it. I wanted it to be perfect, because I thought that was the only thing I could offer him or her. Well, that wasn't true at all! Even if the baby didn't have the same name as me, she had a great chance to have a life of her own and make her own name, not just because of me. I learned that you can't control everything; you can't tell someone that they shouldn't have a life of their own. Sometimes, you have to try new things, even if it feels risky. On the other hand, I think it is really important to make sure
