
Fifa 22

"We've put an enormous amount of work into crafting these FIFA players and we're thrilled to share what we've achieved with players around the world," said Oliver Bierhoff, Senior FIFA Producer. "HyperMotion Technology means that in FIFA 22 we can unlock even more of what makes these particular players truly unique. They're quick, highly technical and tactically aware, which means they're great to play against. But, of course, they're not the only players on the pitch. "We also have new approaches and tactics at our disposal to cater to the many different styles and preferences of the millions of players around the world. Enjoy watching these players in motion and think about the possibility of bringing them to the pitch in FIFA 22, wherever you are, for you to play," added Bierhoff. Kinect 2.0 support: Support for using Kinect 2.0 for the new Real Player Motion Control system in FIFA 22 has been added. This allows players to use their body as a natural controller while playing. Shot Control: Expanded Shot Control, a feature introduced in FIFA 18, now includes added functionality to mark the area of the pitch in front of the player and instantly see the defender information. This feature allows players to quickly learn the position of the defender, tailor their attacking options and execute their shots quicker. FIFA players will now benefit from intuitive shot control. Improved Ratings for Defenders: Dynamic Player Ratings will take into consideration the opposition's recent results, with the top team's defender now matched against the bottom team's defender. Improved Man Marking: New defender animation will only be triggered when the new dynamic player ratings are at their peak, allowing defenders to mark their opponent more effectively. Player Motion Capture: Player motion capture data was added to the Quick Match screen, meaning when a new player is created, their motion capture data will be available to quickly fine-tune the facial and physical appearance and improve player identity. The best FIFA player will want to impress. Improved Ball Flight: New algorithms have been applied to achieve more accurate and realistic ball flight. AI Improvements: Over the years, FIFA has continued to improve its AI algorithms, and FIFA 22 is no exception. There are new defensive behaviours and more fluent and responsive attacking behaviours, which contribute to higher levels of team
